Meet the WNYWF Summer Interns

WNY Women's Foundation is thrilled to have six remarkable young women joining us in our office this summer as interns. Our summer interns range in age from high school through recent college graduates and have been learning about all aspects of WNYWF operations. It's not just all work; they've been enjoying summer in Buffalo by joining us at events like a summer cookout and Slow Roll. If you see them at a WNY Women's Foundation event, be sure to say hello!

Madison Pellnat is a rising sophomore at Binghamton University studying biology and political science. This summer, she is helping out with social media, communications and development. She's enjoyed learning about the importance of the WNY Women's Foundations programs and grants that have been able to inspire and improve the lives of so many local women and girls.

Destiny Diaz recently graduated from the University at Buffalo with a BS in mathematics and a minor in Spanish. In the fall of 2019, she will begin a PhD program in cancer sciences at the Roswell Park Comprehensive Cancer Center, a program in collaboration with the University at Buffalo. This summer, she is organizing and collecting research for the WNY Women's Foundation.

Rija Tayyab is a High Road Fellow from Lahore, Pakistan. She is a rising Junior at the Industrial and Labor Relations School at Cornell University with minors in Feminist, Gender and Sexuality Studies along with American Capitalism. This summer, she is working on the creation of the Gen W initiative and conducting research. She is passionate about achieving pay and workplace equity for women in Buffalo and beyond and hopes to advocate and work towards gender and race equity in the future.

Liv Larson is a rising senior at Mt. Mercy Academy. This is her second summer interning at the WNY Women's Foundation. This summer, she is working on the Census 2020 initiative and outreach.

Isabelle Lawley is a rising sophomore at New York University studying musical theater. This summer, she is helping with planning the WNYWF's 20th Anniversary Celebration.

Annalise Cudeck is a rising sophomore at SUNY Geneseo. This summer, she is working on organizing and collecting child care research for the WNY Women's Foundation.
